Joint meeting

No agreement reached on Lost Colony housing

by Arlene Surprenant

An impasse was reached at Monday night's selectmen's meeting when board members discussed proposed low to moderate income housing on Virginia and Larsen Roads with the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) and the North Reading Board of Selectmen.

Each side made attempts to explain its views and find a solution agreeable to all. It couldn't be done.

Jeff Nutting, acting town administrator of North Reading, told those present that he felt the proposed three or four single family homes places "an unreasonable burden on the town of North Reading" and the homes would be isolated from the rest of Wilmington. Nearby residents, he added, "strongly oppose" the housing and "want you to place it elsewhere."

The crux seemed to be whether the Wilmington selectmen would or could place it elsewhere, if lots other than the eight approved were considered buildable.

Rocco DePasquale pointed out that there wasn't much flexibility in moving to another part of town. Jim Stewart explained that with only $65,000 per home allotted by the state and a moritorium on the sale of town-owned land, there wasn't much they could do.

In answering charges by North Reading selectmen that Wilmington was "dumping" their homes on the town of North Reading, DePasquale said, "we want you to sincerely believe we are not attempting to dump homes in your community."

The Executive Office of Community Development (EOCD) also came in for its share of the blame for approving the lots along the North Reading line.

DePasquale mentioned that "your argument is really with EOCD' as they decided on these sites out of a possible 30 given to them for consideration. The WHA, he said, went along with the three or four lots for the "convenience" of the developer.

North Reading selectmen chairman Neil Fransen pointed out that the EOCD assured them there were other lots available and they, too, felt Wilmington was dumping homes in the Virginia Road area.

DePasquale then questioned whether EOCD was making "a political football" out of the issue. He suggested that EOCD representatives meet with all three boards in a joint meeting, something with which North Reading selectman Nick O'Brien readily concurred.

"In no way could we have built on these lots without EOCD approval," said WHA Executive Director Lillian Buckley. She went on to explain she had received a letter from Family Housing Coordinator Suzanne Barclay (from EOCD), who told her board to address drainage, water pressure, and water service problems before going further with the housing. This the WHA is attempting to do.

WHA Chairman Kevin McMillan said that he results of water pressure tests done that morning by Carl Sopper of Water and Waste Pipe Testing from Lynnfield showed there is "excellent" water pressure in the area and the eight inch water main there is "more than adequate."

Would Wilmington consider duplexes, was another question raised by Nutting. He said North Reading "would like to negotiate" into one duplex in the area rather than three or four homes.

"Duplexes cannot be allowed to be built in Wilmington," according to a zoning bylaw, said DePasquale emphatically. He pointed out that he and many other residents want true scattered sites which could best be achieved by single family homes.

Selectman Gerald Brooks of North Reading felt that state law supercedes local zoning, though there was some confusion on both sides as to the interpretation of the law.

In any case, said Brooks, "I will push this as far as I can, even if it means going to court."

Wilmington selectmen were determined too. Most agreed vocally they would stand by the present lots so that they in no way would jeopardize the 32 units of elderly housing tied in with the funding package.

Bob Cain, Wilmington selectman, seemed angry when he made the pointed observation that the North Reading board wouldn't be at the meeting if the homes were being built by a private developer rather than the WHA.

In fact, added Buckley, she had heard from a neighbor that 10 private homes were slated to be built on the North Reading side, though Brooks thought they were slated for the Wilmington side of the line.

Bridge plans bother Diamond Crystal

by Arlene Surprenant

Fran Mauriello and Charles Spaulding of the Diamond Crystal Salt Co. of Burlington Avenue are concerned about the final design plan of the Route 62 Bridge and changes proposed for the Wilmington Center area, changes which will seriously affect their plant.

They met with selectmen Monday night in a continuing effort to explain their views to Wilmington town boards and see if selectmen could impress those views on the state.The state, along with the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority, will oversee the project.

Mauriello, who has been "extremely close" to this project since its inception, told selectmen if this plan goes through "it would just about put us out of business."

And, said Mauriello firmly, "we will do everything in our power" to stay here and try to resolve the problem.

The problem is multi-faceted. According to the final plan, Diamond Crystal Salt will lose its lower entrance where it now receives goods and be left with only one entrance. This will create a hardship, according to the two men, as accessibility to trucking is imperative to the plant.

This change alone, said Mauriello, would have a "devastating effect" on plant operations. Also, he added, there are safety and drainage problems which need to be addressed now, before the anticipated public hearing in October.

"It takes time to even redesign a little bit," he explained adding that their concerns should be looked at now or "there is not going to be an open feeling of looking at problems" later on.

Mauriello explained that the state had assured them they would take care of the problem, but nothing was ever done.

State Rep. James Miceli told the board engineers had been sent out, but he said, he was more concerned with making changes to accommodate residents rather than Diamond Crystal.

Meeting Tuesday to fill vacancy on School Committee

by Arlene Surprenant

Trying to bring two boards together to resolve a problem sometimes poses its own problems, as School Superintendent Robert Horan and School Committee Chairman Tony Accardi found out Monday night.

The two men met with the Wilmington Bord of Selectmen to pinpoint a meeting date when both boards could nominate candidates to fill a school committee vacancy left by the death of John D. Brooks.

Talk went round and round. Accardi asked that his board be given "reasonable notice" so members could plan to be present. He preferred waiting until September when vacations and other commitments would be out of the way.

Rocco DePasquale made a motion to post the meeting for Tuesday, August 27. This would allow enough time for interested parties to come forward, if they were interested in being nominated, and would give ample notice to board members, he said. If anyone were not able to make the meeting, they would be able to submit a proxy, DePasquale added.

Board members voted unanimously in favor of the August 27 date, with a tentative time of 5:30 p.m.

Further discussion centered on past practices in nominating new members and the voting procedure. It also centered on getting someone with the proper qualifications.

Jim Stewart was all for giving every Wilmington citizen an opportunity to fill the open slot.

At this writing, only one person has shown an interest in the position, according to several selectmen.

After the date was set, Horan told members he appreciated the "excellent cooperation" he's had to date, especially in moving the renovation project along and preparing for an anticipated "smooth opening" of school this year.

Wilmington schools open Sept. 3

School will open a day early this year for students in the Wilmington Public Schools.

For students in grades one through 12, school will open on Tues., Sept. 3.

Children in kindergarten will have their first day of school on Wed., Sept. 4.

On Tuesday, school will open 90 minutes later than the normal starting time. Morning bus schedules on Tuesday will be 90 minutes later than usual.

Wednesday will be a regular school day, with normal hours.

Selectmen approve precinct changes

Voting precincts in Wilmington will have new boundary lines in 1988. The selectmen approved the changes unanimously on Monday night.

Town Clerk Pat Lynch presented selectmen with descriptions of the new precinct boundaries. Precinct 5 had grown, and now had more voters than other precincts.

The changes will shift part of Precinct 5 into Precinct 2. Part of Precinct 2 will shift into Precinct 3, and part of 3 into 4. Precincts 1 and 6 will not change.

Mrs. Lynch said, though, that the changes would not take effect until the 1988 election for representative.

Parents seek outdoor court for basketball

by Arlene Surprenant

A group of parents, led by Paul Cardello, approached the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday night seeking an outdoor basketball court for summer use. Presently, explained Cardello, the 44 boys in the program are "making do" with Digital's court as no other space is avaialble.

Because girls have also expressed an interest in the sport, Cardello felt they could "easily" count on having 150 youngsters involved in a program next year.

Cardello also praised local corporations who showed an interest in their problem, especially Digital and Avco which offered corporate sponsorship of the program, if they run short of cash.

Selectman Dan Ballou was wholeheartedly in favor of the idea. As a basketball afficianado, he said, he saw a definite need for a basketball program in town.

Several ideas came under discussion.

Jim Stewart suggested turning the present Walker School site (once the building is demolished) into the Jason M. Stevenson Memorial Recreational Area. Stevenson was the boy fatally injured in a recent accident near the town common. If his idea goes through, Stewart added, they could allot space for a regulation basketball court.

Other suggestions included the use of tennis courts at three schools, use of the proposed ice arena if no ice were to be made in summer, or creation of a court at the Glen Road playground to keep town sports activities together.

One parent of two boys in the program said flatly that the present facilities in town are a "disgrace."

Rocco DePasquale told the parents to promote what they wanted to do and make the issue "a town interested project." Perhaps, he added, they could even go through the budget process at town meeting to either build a new court or gain the right to use school gyms and become trustees to avoid paying the $17 hourly wage to janitors to use school gyms after school hours.

Ballou thought it was "amazing" that the high school gym has been locked up after hours "ever since I can remember" and the taxpayers get no use out of it. He, too, felt the gyms should be available without the prohibitive cost now required.

Board members suggested the short term solution of using the high school tennis courts, if they could be made playable, and agreed to look further at a long term solution.

Seward: A man of gentle wit

seen the Binghamton headline, said she loved him so much she'd willingly follow him to Timbuktu.

Seward's first job after graduation was with Yale University Press, but he said he was "despondent," pining for a post with a major publishing firm, when he got a letter from Doubleday:

" 'Dear Sir — If you still want the job, show up at Garden City, Long Island, etc.' "

"So I sent my fiancee a telegram: 'Timbuktu Ruled Out. Garden City Next Stop.' "

It was during his years sharing an office with Ogden Nash at Doubleday, Seward said, that the celebrated humorist's first published work appeared, in Publisher's Weekly, and it just happened to be about Bill Seward's job of replying to queries received by Doubleday:

"I know a bright young man," Nash wrote, "who makes a good living just answering foolish questions."

Another of Nash's first works, Seward added, was about their joint office in the city:

" 'I work in an office at 244 Madison Avenue,

And I say to myself: You've a good job haven't you?

If I were a bird, I'd fly to Third,

Or even to Second Avenue.' "

"When he read it to me, I said, 'That's damn good.'

"Ogden said, 'It has merit.' "

It was Nash's first work to be published in the New Yorker magazine.

Later, after both men had left Doubleday, Seward said he and Elizabeth Edwards, now Mrs. Seward, attended a concert of Camille Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," in 1932, in which Nash served as narrator.

"I wonder if he'll remember me," Seward said to his wife, as Nash came down the stairs after the concert.

" 'My God, Bill,' " was the first thing Nash said as he saw Seward and extended his hand.

"After introductions, my wife said to him, 'Were you nervous?'

"Ogden, dressed in white tie and tails, replied, 'Lady, if I didn't have a stiff collar on, I'd fall on my face.' "

While at Doubleday, Seward said he conceived and started the Department of Special Editions. His first project, "Currier and Ives, Printmakers to the American People," was a limited issue whose 450 copies were sold out before it left the presses.

After leaving Doubleday in the early 30s, Seward said he made the "mistake" of starting his own publishing firm (Huntington Press), and one day, while his wife was in the office, she overheard his secretary say to Seward:

"The White House is on the phone," which impressed Mrs. Seward even more than Timbuktu or Garden City.

It was French Struther, Herbert Hoover's aide, Seward explained, calling with the President's official permission to publish "A Remedy for Disappearing Gamefishes," based on two of Mr. Hoover's speeches.

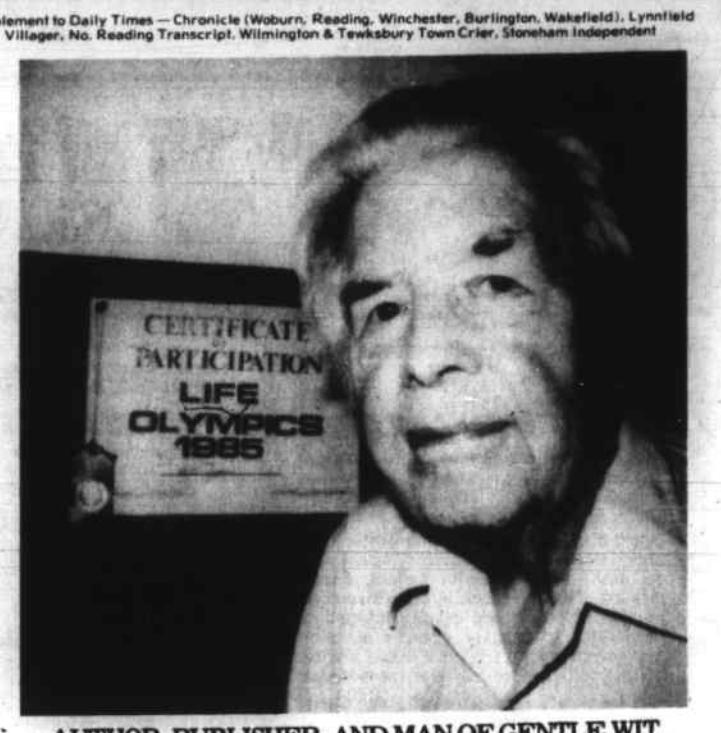

"That was just AFTER the stock market crash," Seward quipped, but, like the Currier and Ives, the new limited edition was also an immediate sell-out, despite a cost of $75.

His publishing firm made money, Seward explained, but he was not altogether happy, since he found many people to be "long on promises and short on delivery," so he turned to management consulting, in the late 1930s, until his retirement.

He moved to Winchester 16 years ago, after the death of his wife, to be near his daughter, social worker Elizabeth Seward Ellis, and his grandchildren. His son, Henry Huntington Seward, B.A. (also Yale — 1951) M.B.A. and Ph.D., is a retired Air Force Lt. Colonel who lives in West Berlin, N.J.

"At latest count, I have 16 descendants," said Seward, born on July 13, 1898, and he's proud of both descendants and ancestors, "though my famous connections (which include Alexander Graham Bell and Connecticut Governor Samuel Huntington, signer of the Declaration of Independence) haven't done me a bit of good."

It was during a visit to Winchester by Michael Dukakis that Seward said he was "lucky enough" to be placed next to the gubernatorial candidate, "because I was an old man who carried a cane. So I asked him a series of impertinent questions, and made suggestions, including 'When speaking, try not looking at your notes.'

AUTHOR, PUBLISHER, AND MAN OF GENTLE WIT, William Seward, of Winchester and Woburn, provides whimsy and wit during a recent interview at his Nursing Home room. A participant in this past spring's "Life Olympics," held on a very cold day, Seward said he didn't run, but "shivered a lot" between the snowflakes. (Jim Rouillard photo)

"As a result of my impertinence, we've carried on an extensive correspondence. He sent me a copy of his last 'State of the State' Address, during which I noticed he didn't once consult his notes."

A voracious reader, who said he can still read anything in 10-point type or above, Seward is a particular fan of Lord Horatio Hornblower, fictional naval hero whom he described as a combination of U. S. Naval Officer Chester Nimitz and England's Lord Nelson. And though he loves fiction, Seward's own published book is non-fiction, "Teamwork in Industry," which appeared in 1949.

Despite his love of reading, Seward said he has a lot of time on his hands now, and welcomes visitors who also like to talk and to listen. Since he's a former friend, co-worker, and deskmate of Ogden Nash, it seems appropriate to end with an apt quotation from Nash, but it was difficult to choose, so we offer two:

"They are a higher form of life,
My dog, my daughter, and my wife.
Inhabitants of a fourth dimension
Too mystic for my comprehension."

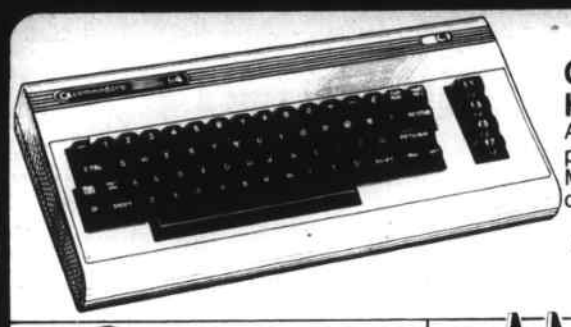

from "The Private Dining Room."

Remember that's Nash, not Seward, writing — and so let's conclude with one from "Versus: The Middle," which may be a little more appropriate for a man approaching 90:

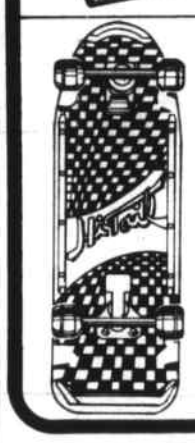

When I remember bygone days
I think how evening follows morn;
So many I loved were not yet dead,
So many I love were not yet born."

A Colorado blue spruce, red maple, white flowering dogwood, red oak, European mountainash, black walnut, silver maple, Norway spruce, green ash, and sugar maple tree will be given to members joining during August. The six to 12 inch trees will be shipped this fall at the right time for planting between October 15 and December 10. They will be sent postage paid with enclosed planting instructions.

These trees were selected because they provide a wide range of benefits: flowers, berries and nuts, as well as shade and beautiful foliage, according to the Foundation.

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, a $10 membership contribution should be sent to Ten Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410, by August 31, 1985.

First aid, coaches programs at health center

Today's youth sports coach needs to know not only how to play the game and win, but how to coach students in order to prevent athletic injuries as well. The coach should also be providing guidance on what the young athlete should eat or avoid before games.

In order to help coaches acquire the additional expertise, the Regional Health Center in Wilmington will conduct two programs for area youth coaches, parents and physical education / athletic teachers. ""Nutrition for Young Athletes" will be presented Thursday, August 22, from 7 to 9 p.m., and the American Red Cross Standard Multimedia First Aid training with a special component on preventing and treating sports injuries will be conducted Thursdays, September 5, 12 and 19 from 7 to 10 p.m. for three-year American Red Cross certification.

"Nutrition for Young Athletes" will include special nutritional requirements for student athletes, calorie sources for training and completion, the how and why of carbohydrate loading, precompetition meals, water and electrolyte requirements and several myths and truths regarding nutrition and sports. Time will be provided for questions and answers.

This workshop will be conducted by Janet Murray, M.S., R.D., a registered dietician and nutrition counselor at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington, who has special training in the area of nutrition and athletics. Miss Murray is also a practicing triathlete.

In he presentation, Miss Murray will point out how the nutritional needs for the young athlete vary from older athletes since the nutritional needs must meet their growth requirements as well as those for training and competition.

The First Aid course, emphasizing prevention and treatment of sports injuries, in addition to the units which meet American Red Cross certification requirements, will be taught by Richard W. Silveria, B.S., community health educator.

The course includes chokesaving, poisons, burns, bandaging, splinting, litter carry, fractures and sprains, eye injuries, infections, animal and insect bites and much more. In addition to Red Cross requirements, Mr. Silveria will address the following: the importance of proper equipment, the wrapping and strapping of athletic injuries, the Rice concept in treating injuries, moving and injured athlete, and the role of proper conditioning techniques in the prevention of injuries.

Masonic Temple renovated

Under the guidance of Brother Roy Serrintino, chairman of the board of trustees of Friendship Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Wilmington, the Masonic Temple on Church Street, built more than 100 years ago, has been restored to its original lustre.

Reportedly Dr. Hiller came from Bavaria and designed the building, to be used as his medical laboratory, in the form of a Bavarian castle with four turrets, one on each corner. Two turrets, facing Church Street, remain.

The outside of the structure has baeen restored with paint, and siding and new windows have been installed. The interior has a new heating plant, air conditioning . The entire building has been insulated and all the walls have been paneled. Indirect lighting has been installed on both floors.

The temple on the second floor is avaialble to all Masonic organizations including the Eastern Star, the Rainbow and Demolay. The lower hall is available to all organizations and functions.

The Friendship Lodge A.F.A.M. was organized in 1901 and has owned this buildingsince 1903. It is centrally located on Church Street next to the fire station with ample parking. All inquiries about the building should be directed to 658-2122.

Seen in Yankee

The September issue of Yankee Magazine has become of interest to Town Crier readers. Some are commenting on the pictures and story of Frances Hiller, the lady who called herself Mrs. Dr. Hiller. The story and pictures appear on Page 160.

There is also a listing of 60 "firsts" for New England, facts of which New Englanders may, presumably, be proud. Two Boston Sunday papers made comments about those firsts on August 18. One of the sets of comments could be a press release. The other was not.

Among the firsts, uncommented upon by the Boston papers, was that Colonel William Prescott, he who commanded the redoubt at Bunker Hill, first gave the order not to fire "until you see the whites of their eyes."

Colonel Prescott did give such an order, but he was not the first to do so. This paper does not pretend to know who first gave such an order, but it was given by Prince Charles of Prussia, in 1745, in a battle against Austrian forces, at the Battle of Jagendorf.

As for Mrs. Dr. Hiller. The story says it was a "fact" that she was the mother of 23 children and presents other items on which no comment need be made.

Frances Hiller was a lady who would always please Boston newspaper reporters by a story which she claimed was factual, but which she had made up just to have another story about her in the Boston papers. The "23 children" story was one of those, with no basis for truthful reporting.

Visiting Avco

Avco Systems President Hank McCard congratulates Wilmington High School graduate Jay McFayden for being awarded the $1000 Avco scholarship. Jay will attend Tufts University in September, majoring in mechanical engineering.

James McFayden visits Avco

In July, Avco scholarship winner James McFadyen was invited to visit with Avco executives and tour the facilities at 201 Lowell St. in Wilmington.

Avco Systems awards a $1,000 scholarship annually to a Wilmington High School senior who has exceptional academic achievements and plans a career in either engineering or science. Jay will attend Tufts University in September, majoring in mechanical engineering.

During his visit, Jay was the guest of Avco President Hank McCard. Mr. McCard, who rose through the engineering ranks to become chief executive, discussed the importance of a broad educational background in engineering and the management sciences and shared his career experiences with the Wilmington graduate. Jay continued his discussion at lunch with Bill Fitzgerald, vice-president of engineering and Ron Milauskus, manager of strategic mechanical design, a graduate of Tufts.

Jay then toured the Avco manufacturing facilities and was shown how engineering designs become part of the defense systems that Avco builds for the U.S. government.

Jay was salutatorian of his class, a member of the National Honor Society, president of the junior class, a president of the local branch of the National Mathematics honor society, a trumpet and trombone player for the high school jazz band and an avid tennis and hockey player. He also received a commendation from the National Merit Scholarship Foundation.

British admiral unprepared for Bunker Hill

Bunker Hill

This is a classic picture of the Battle of Bunker Hill, by Howard Pyle. General Howe did not want to order a frontal attack, but was forced to do so under the circumstances because he was unable to attack the shores of the Mystic River.

©Copyright 1985
by Capt. Larz Neilson

General Billy Howe never intended to make a frontal attack on those Yankee farmers, entrenched on Bunker Hill. He was the senior major general in the British Army in Boston, and he had a lot of military experience.

Billy was a person who was well known to the Americans. He and his brothers George and Dick had served many years in America, and when George was killed near Ticonderoga there were Americans who put up funds to erect a monument to him, in Britain.

Over six feet tall, a man with snapping black eyes, William Howe was a man of demonstrated courage. It was he who had led 24 volunteers up the cliffs of Quebec, in September 1759, to overpower the French Troops stationed at the top. That was the beginning of the battle on the Plains of Abraham, the battle which ended 100 years of French and Indian terror, in New England. That battle made Canada a British colony.

He regularly sided with the "friends of America," in England, people who were opposed to the policies of King George III. Howe did not come to America as an enemy. The king had proclaimed that he was as willing to extend the olive branch as the sword, and William Howe hoped he was the person who could do that.

All of a sudden, on June 17, 1775, he had to put aside his hoped for diplomatic role, and as a senior major general, take command of the British soldiers being sent to a place called Charlestown, where Americans were entrenched on top of a hill over looking Boston Harbor.

Three regiments were there, commanded by Colonel William Prescott. Two were from Middlesex County, and one from Essex County. The Americans, about 900, had been digging since about midnight, and they had an entrenchment about 160 feet long, and 80 feet wide, with carefully packed earthworks and fascines.

One of those regiments was commanded by Colonel Ebenezer Bridge. He was the Billerica Minuteman who had commanded at Meriam's Corner in Concord on the 19th of April. Many men who had been with him in Concord were now with him on June 17, 1775, in the redoubt at Bunker Hill.

His was the smallest of the three regiments. It had only nine companies instead of 10. Three of those companies were, that day, on detached duty.

The British Army had to clear those men out of that earthwork before Billy Howe could offer an olive branch to the Americans.

The soldiers Howe was to command were transported by boats of the Royal Navy from Boston. Two trips were needed, to take those soldiers to a place called Morton's Point in Charlestown.

Morton's Point had a small hill, named Morton's Hill. It was the smallest of three hills in Charlestown. There the British were being assembled.

Half a mile away was Breed's Hill, soon to be called Bunker Hill, and with the Yankee entrenchment. Still further away was Bunker's Hill.

Morton's Hill had its advantages, as a place from which to launch an assault, and William Howe was a master of light infantry tactics.

He believed in encircling an enemy, and in attacking where he was not expected. He did not want to make a frontal attack on those Americans if any other means was available.

His soldiers were to be mustered as if preparing for such an attack. That would take the attention of the Americans, while other things happened.

Billy Howe planned to send his 10 "eldest" companies to the right, up the banks of the Mystic River and attack the Americans from the rear. Fifteen minutes of such an attack would suffice. Then he could march his men to the American headquarters in Cambridge.

Howe went on board the principal battleship of the Royal Navy which was at Charlestown, HMS Somerset, to confer with the admiral commanding. He wanted to send a ship up the Mystic River, to bombard the Americans from the rear. HMS Somerset was a well named vessel, ideal for such a purpose.

Admiral Samuel Graves, the commanding admiral, was on board the Somerset. He was in command of all the ships of the Royal Navy, from Halifax to Georgia. He had been in Boston for about 14 months. He commanded battleships, and smaller vessels, down to sloops and schooners.

All of them, it can be noted, were undermanned. That was to be expected of course. Ships were only fully manned in times of war.

Graves was distantly related to one of the men who had visited the Land of Nod, in what is now North Wilmington, sometime about 1645. The Town of Charlestown had given the land to 10 of its most prominent citizens and, an Admiral Graves was one of them.

If Billy Howe did not know Admiral Samuel Graves well, he learned about that officer in the next few minutes.

Admiral Graves, during his 14 months in Boston, was to be described as a bully and a grafter. He had three nephews who were lieutenants in the Royal Navy, serving on ships in Boston. The admiral was constantly arguing with his captains that those nephews deserved more promotion.

His wife was present in Boston. It was her belief that the wife of the commanding admiral should be the first lady of the Province of Massachusetts Bay in New England. Wasn't the Royal Navy the senior service, superior to the Army?

Between Mrs. Graves and Mrs. Gage, the wife of the governor and general there was no love lost. Admiral Graves supported his wife wholeheartedly.

He was too busy, it seemed, to have time for ordinary routine feats of seamanship. His ship was anchored only about 100 yards from the place where the waters of the Mystic River joined those of Boston Harbor, yet never, in that year in Boston had he thought of surveying the Mystic River, to see if ships could go there. Now General Howe was on his ship.

Graves was being requested to send ships up the Mystic River, to bombard those Americans from the rear. His ships would probably go aground if he were to try such a tactic. Graves could not assent.

Billy Howe could only shrug his shoulders. In the British way of doing things the admirals took their orders from London. Local generals could issue no orders to the Navy.

It was about this time that Colonel John Stark, with about 800 tough New Hampshire men marched over Bunker Hill. The regiment went down toward the Mystic River and began to fortify a rail fence.

Colonel Stark had served in Rogers Rangers, in the French and Indian War. Rogers was a remarkable man, a person who instilled military knowledge into his officers.

Stark looked over the embankment and at the river. There, eight feet below, as a beach. It was a way for British troops to march to the rear of the Americans, entirely unseen.

Quickly Stark ordered 200 men to break up a stonewall, and build a new one on the beach, from the embankment to the water. He laid the men down, in three ranks, behind that wall. Stark then went out and drove a stake into the ground, about 40 yards from the wall. His orders were that no one was to fire a shot until the British had passed that stake, and then everyone was to fire low.

Having the men in three ranks, instead of the regular two, was something Stark had learned from Rogers. It increased the fire power. Each rank would fire in turn and then load, but there would not be the long gaps between volleys. Rogers had written of this and Stark knew it.

Billy Howe prepared the soldiers, in long lines, to march against the redoubt. The first rank was light infantry. The second was grenadiers, and the third regular infantry. There was to be a slow march, against the redoubt on the hill.

The march started. When the line was about a quarter of a mile from th redoubt the light infantry, in the front rank, filed off to the right, and down to the beach. From there the light infantry quickened its pace. It became the flying column which was to destroy those New Hampshire men, on that beach, behind that stone wall.

For the past 30 years British bayonets had swept the enemy before them. It was reasonable to think it would happen now.

Three hundred and fifty soldiers, the pick of Billy Howe's army, surged forward. They passed the stake which had been driven into the ground.

There was a roar as the New Hampshire farmers fired. The front two ranks, Welsh Fusiliers, fell, smashed by the one-ounce balls of that first volley.

Other British charged through and over those dead soldiers. The second rank of New Hampshire men fired. Again British soldiers fell, this time men of the Kings Own Regiment.

Behind them other soldiers surged forward. The Americans had fired two volleys. Now was the time for the bayonet!

But, unheard of, came a third volley. The impossible had happened on that beach of the Mystic River. And, by this time the front rank of the New Hampshire men had reloaded their guns, and were ready for another volley.

Ghastly holes were torn into the lines of the British. It was too much to face that fire. William Howe's light infantry turned and fled.

Ninety-six men were dead before that stone barricade on the beach.

Howe suddenly found himself in a position in which the only thing he could do was the one thing he did not want to do. That was to make a direct attack, on the Yankee redoubt on top of the hill.

Grimly he gave the order. "Attack all along the line."

Admiral John Byng was executed by a firing squad, on the deck of HMS Monarque, for failure to give proper aid to a British force, in Minorca. That execution took place in Portsmouth, England, on the 14th of March 1757. Winston Churchill later said it was "to encourage" the other admirals.

But Samuel Graves never suffered that fate.

Samuel Graves, just like every officer of the Royal Navy, knew of the fate of Admiral Byng.

After the death of those light infantrymen, on the beach of the Mystic River Admiral Graves suddenly became a very helpful man. He went ashore and offered all kinds of help to the commanding general.

But the tides had changed. No longer could he easily get a ship or boats into the Mystic River and behind the American barricades.

Howe had committed himself to a frontal attack. The admiral was a little late in changing his mind.

The important thing, though, for Admiral Samuel Graves, was that he was able to report how he went ashore, and offered all kinds of assistance to the commanding general. That would be very handy evidence, if there was a general court martial, with charges similar to those of which Admiral Byng had been found guilty.

The first 15 minutes of battle

Bunker Hill. That's the place where British troops marched up a hill, toward a redoubt full of Americans, and a lot were slaughtered. They reformed, and marched up again, to again suffer the same fate.

It wasn't until the third time, when the Americans had no more ammunition that the British were able to conquer, and drive the Americans out of their redoubt.

Well, sort of.

But that's not the whole story. That story does not tell of the New Hampshire men under the command of Colonel Stark. Those New Hampshire soldiers had the first 15 minutes of fighting, and it was an importqant part of the battle.

That story, too, does not tell about the British Admiral, in command of the ships of the Royal Navy in Boston, and the thing that he did not do. He lost the battle, some say, for the British, because he did not know how deep the water was in the Mystic River.

After the Revolutionary War was over American shipbuilders constructed ships in Medford, and took them to see by the existing channels of the Mystic River. After the war, too, and up to about 100 years ago (or maybe less) deep laden lumber schooners from Maine went up the Mystic River to unload lumber in Medford.

Admiral Samuel Graves di dnot know of that channel, which started only a few feet from where his flagship was anchored - or so it seemsdd.

There are three stories. Onecomes from "The Story of Bunker Hill" by Thomas J. Fleming. Fleming spent a lot of time checking diaries and local reports of the battle. His account can tell more of what some of the soldiers did than any other. It is his account which is the base of this story in the Town Crier.

A second version comes from "The Battle of Bunker's Hill" by John R. Elting. In one sense it is the official version, the onet hat has been accepted by the National Park Service. Elting does not accept the story that Admiral Graves did not do his part in the battle.

A third version, British, is in a "Dictionary of National Biography" published by the Oxford University Press. That volume blames "an incapable government at home (that) makes Graves responsible for the hopeless state of affairs" in Boston.

The reader is invited to read of the first fighting, and of the non-assistance given the British Army, by the ships of the Royal Navy, at the Battle of Bunker Hill.

Harry has one wing in a sling

Harry Sandler, North Wilmington pharmacist, has been going around with his arm in a sling ever since the first of July or thereabouts.

No. It is not a broken arm. With a broken his arm would be in a sling for only a week or two, maybe.

Harry and ' took a vacation trip to Scotland, early in June. Up in the Highlands, all over the country, they had a wonderful time, including some time spent in Edinburgh, which is one of the most beautiful cities in the world.

Somehow, while getting out of an elevator, in one of the hotels in Edinburgh, Harry wrenched his shoulder. The muscles still have not recovered.

But Edinburgh is wonderful, he says.

Square dance planning

Harvey and Doreen McNeil of Wilmington (l), presidents of the Skirts 'n' Flirts Square Dance Club discuss plans for free fun nites of square dancing with Ray and Carole Aubut, (center), editors of the New England Square Dance Caller Magazine and Barbara and Bob Brown of Wilmington. Ray Aubut is also the caller-instructor of the fun nights.

Square dance season opens

The Skirts 'n' Flirts Square Dance Club has invited area couples to a free introductory fun nite of dancing at the West Intermediate School, Carter Lane, Wilmington at 8 p.m. Thursday evenings, September 5, 12 and 19. On Thursday, Sept. 26, regular weekly classes will begin.

Square dancing is an activity that can provide men and women with regular exercise to assist in improving their health and fitness. Rhythmic and continuous exercise that involves a large percentage of the body's musculature is the best way to attain cardiovascular fitness. Square dancing is also a very efficient exercise in terms of toning muscles and giving people a good feeling. In addition, it can assist in a weight loss program. Many studies have shown that exercise is more effective than dieting for losing weight. Health care professionals agree that when reasonable eating habits are combined with exercise, weight loss is more rapid than when dieting or exercise is used alone.

Square dancing is also an activity that can provide an emotional release from tensions and frustration in today's high pressure society. It discourages the competition that is so evident in competitive sports and encourages participation by everyone strictly for pleasure. It requires no special talents or previous dancing ability. It facilitates communicaiton and interaction while generating fun and laughter.

Today it is so easy to sit and watch tv or play computer games devoid of human contact. Couples need to begin a regualr program of exercise together. It is the key to getting healthier and staying that way. For further information call 658-4031 or 935-0905.

Ombudsmen seek advocates

The Ombudsman Program of the Elder Services of the Merrimack Valley is recruiting men and women to work as advocates for the elderly who reside in rest homes and in nursing homes in the local area.

Ombudsmen provide information, referral services and work to resolve residents' concerns.

There are two opportunities to be involved - one as a paid staff, 5 years or older, of limited income and interested in the elderly; or as a volunteer, 60 years of age or older, with a reimbursement for expenses.

Call Mary Marsh, Elder Services of Merrimack Valley for information; 683-7747 or 1-800-892-0890.

Health center offers weight loss program

A medically and nutritionally sound weight control program, teaching people the practical way to weight loss through a sensible eating plan and by changing eating habits, will be offered at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

Participants will learn how to lose weight and improve nutritional habits and choices through the 12-week weight group "Learning to Lose," an educational nutritional program. An aerobic exercise component has been added this year. With regular workouts, and by following nutritional guidelines, you will eliminate those excess, unhealthy pounds.

This expanded program which is for those who need to lose 30 pounds or less and have no medical complications will begin with an orientation session on Thursday, September 12 from 7 to 9 p.m. The course is limited to 12 participants and there is a $10 non-refundable registration fee.

Janet Murray, M.S., R.D., nutritionist and program leader explained, "We can help people lose weight through changing eating behaviors, such as down eating and eliminating food temptations. It's better to be patient and lose weight slowly and safely, about a pound or two a week, and know that it can be a permanent weight loss; rather than losing five pounds in a week, only to regain it soon after." With the additional aerobic exercise component, participants will be able to enjoy a medically approved activity program specially developed for the overweight.

Registration is required by calling 657-3910, ext. 567. Deadline for registration is September 5.

Rocky road

Many Tewksbury streets need repairs. Starr Avenue, off Lowe Street, is one of those. It was constructed by a private contractor, and was not properly graded. For years it has been "the Rocky Road to Dublin". Some rocks are now coming through the surface of the road.

The August 25, 1960 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

A 171 acre, $350,000 golf course to be known as "The Garden of Eden" was planned on Chestnut Street on the former Bell Farm, a dairy farm owned by Millard Pipes.

The board of selectmen voted unanimously to place a motarorium on new gas stations while a study is made of "gasoline alley" and the now 11 active gas stations along Main Street; two in the inactive class and three building including the Esso Station voted Monday night.

The Wilmington - Tewksbury Elks were planning their third annual clambake.

The planning board instructed Chairman Bill Beers to talk with Town Manager Cecil Lancaster about establishment of a park commission.

Article 5 in the warrant for the upcoming special town meeting asked that the town accept as a gift a sum of money from the East Wilmington Improvement Association to be placed in a trust fund the income therefrom to be used to buy juvenile books for Wilmington's public library.

Mrs. Hanna Lord of Morse Avenue was uninjured in an auto accident on Lowell Street in Reading the previous Saturday.

A new statute read by the planning board chairman forbid spectators from taking part in duscussions at board meetings without the expess permission of the chairman.

Bill Wilson of Andover Street was awarded a masters degree in counseling and guidance from Boston University.

Tuesday an afternoon B & M freight train set 13 fires as it went through town on the Portland Division (North Wilmington). Reading, Tewksbury and Andover sent fire trucks to assist as fires burned at half mile distances up and down the tracks. Each town put out two fires while two Wilmington trucks put out six each and the 13th blaze was brought under control by employees of Mytron, using that company's fire fighting materials.

Wilmington firefighter Bill Nee was stung by a bee while fighting one of the blazes and had to be treated by a physician.

Mechanics Savings Bank of Reading was advertising new Thursday evening hours (6-8) for its Wilmington branch.

Guy Micalizzi of Marjorie Road was undergoing boot training at Great Lakes Naval Training Station. He was due home on leave in September after which he would return to duty at Norfolk, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Anomanisto of Ballardvale Street and their son Vincent left Boston Sunday for a four week visit to Italy during which they would view the Olympics. For Mr. Anomanisto it was his first visit home in 48 years.

Air act

The U.S. Air Force F-16 Thunderbirds took part in an air show at Hanscom Field in Bedford on Saturday, and were visible from Wilmington as they performed precision aerial maneuvers. These photos were taken at the air show by Larry May of Parker Street, Wilmington.

Town is not testing water

The Tewksbury Health Department is advising residents that neither the Town of Tewksbury nor the Mass. Department of Environmental Quality Engineering does random water testing of individual homes.

Health Director William McMenimen has issued a statement advising residents that someone is contacting residents regarding having their water tested. Although the caller does not say that he or she is associated with the Tewksbury Water Department, many people have gotten that impression.

The concern of the Health Department is that someone is using this tactic to gain an opportunity to make a sales pitch.

McMenimen advises residents receiving such a call to ask the caller to leave his or her name and telephone number, and to tell him or her that the call will be returned after checking with the proper authority.

World's largest

The C-5A, believed to be the largest military transport in the world, was among many planes on display at Hanscom Field in Bedford on Saturday.

At 'Wakefield's' Restaurant

Catch the flavor of history

By JIM ROUILLARD

Cyrus Wakefield's profile, in frosted glass, greets you at the entrance. Photos of ships, historical figures and fierce, strange apparatus await you on the walls.

And then there's the menu.

If you like a combination of good food garnished with an authentic flavor of local history, saunter down to Water Street, Wakefield — to a new place with a new, bright-painted sign, where you can experience both history and lowcost, upbeat and traditional cuisine, over dinner, lunch or Sunday brunch.

Bob Moses of Wakefield, conceiver and owner of "Wakefield's" restaurant, states his goal in simple, ambitious terms: "to provide a great meal for a great price."

Yet he's accomplished much more than that.

The success of Moses' new restaurant is based on many factors — not the least of which is imagination.

He said he was lying in bed one night, toying with the idea of starting a good quality place to dine in Wakefield — when he conceived the notion of opening a restaurant tied into local history. At "Wakefield's," he's achieved his goal, with flair and style.

Opened on Pearl Harbor Day (Dec. 7) of last year, "Wakefield's" is a scant eight months old. Yet the aspect, decor, and menu provide delight to eye, mind and palate, based on this writer's observation and a random survey of diners ranging from repeat Wakefielders to chance visitors from Washington, D.C.

Moses, a 30-year-old Wakefield native who may look younger because of the energy he generates during 14-hour workdays, spent four months researching town history before launching his venture. The results are as appealing to the eye as to the appetite, with both nostalgic and fascinating aspects of town history lining the walls and lacing the menu of the fledgling restaurant.

Among the fine old prints and photographs: Wakefield's First Paving Apparatus (1912), which looks like a cross between Fulton's steam engine and some weird machine out of H. G. Wells' earlier science fiction. . . An oval silvered frame of some athletic team (softball?) — the coaches sporting high derby hats. . . The town's first police force (1891) consisting of two Indians (patrolmen) and one chief. . . The Wakefield clipper ship, "Hoogly," discharging a cargo of rattans from India at Boston's Constitution Wharf.

But, maybe most beautiful: an original photograph, dated 1897, with two locomotives and their trains, seemingly bent on collision course, their apparent imminent destruction mirrored beneath, in the waters of Crystal Lake.

Beyond history, Moses has brought another dimension to dining in Wakefield. "What do we have for dining in Wakefield except for this place?" said Moses, pausing for an interview in his chef's whites, spotless and bright against a deep tan. "Sandwich shops, fast food places and Chinese food.

"I saw the need for a quality restaurant: a taste of something unique from what we've had before."

The ambience of "Wakefield's" is especially pleasing: a deep burgundy carpet, comfortable, bentwood chairs (stools for a wallside row of high tables.) Each table has fresh flowers and its own cranberry-toned globe lamp. The lower tables have deep wine cloth napkins and pink table cloths overlaid with white lace, glass on top for easy, sensible maintenance. A brass railing with dark wine curtain neatly separates sections of the restaurant, to provide adequate privacy for the individual tables.

Sound expensive? It's not.

Prime rib of beef, and "Steak Quannapowitt," with two baked stuffed or "scampied" shrimp, at $8.95, are the two most costly items on the dinner menu.

The food was described, unsolicited, by visitors from the nation's capital, as "Everything fresh and delicious," with an enthusiastic ditto from a Wakefield couple who said "We've been coming repeatedly, in both small and larger parties, since the place opened, because everything is so good, and so fresh."

Yet you may find your interest in the food is secondary, at first, from the sheer fun and ingenuity of the various menu notes. You may even find yourself ignoring your meal companions to study the menu.

"Wakefield's" is situated less than a block east of Main Street at 15 Water St., appropriately just opposite the parking lot which used to be Wakefield's Town Hall, result of a gift from Cyrus Wakefield of "whatever sum might be needed to build a town hall satisfactory to the town."

Cyrus Wakefield's generosity did not go unheeded. A grateful townspeople petitioned the Legislature, and the town, formerly South Reading, became known in 1868 as Wakefield, in tribute to Cyrus' generosity and the fortune he made by the clever use of a substance considered then of "little value:" rattan, the flexible, reedlike stem of an East Indian palm. the bark, split from the core, is called cane; the core or pith is reed.

The ingenious young Wakefield, in 1844, bought from a Boston stevedore, a bundle of rattan, formerly used only as ballast in ships. He devised several uses for it, including use in furniture, and thereby founded the rattan industry in this country, according to historians.

But don't expect fo find the entire story here. Wend your own way to "Wakefield's" and read all about it on the restaurant's menu: the results of Bob Moses' research — as you wait for your appetizer of gazpacho (an occasional special), crab-stuffed mushrooms, or Wakefield Redskins. Between courses, the prints and photos of old Wakefield — primarily from the 19th century — may draw you from your seat as your sandwich "Greenwood Station" or entree, seafood, "Steak Quannapowitt," or "Lynnfield Center," is in preparation.

I could go on about the menu — but want to leave a few visual and savory surprises for your visit.

Bob Moses, good-looking, energetic, hardworking and personable, with a paramount courtesy to his other guests that was evident even before he knew who I was, is the son of the late, well-known Nick Moses of Wakefield. His mother, Sandra, and brother, John, also work at "Wakefield's," he added.

A former curbsetter and union official, Moses has packed a lot of experience in his 30 years. For four of those years, from 1974 to 1978, he fought his way back from two serious knee injuries, one from high school football, one from a motorcycle accident. Though his doctors (who performed four operations on both knees) told him he'd never play racquet-ball again, he does play now, and loves his downhill winter skiing as well.

A man with 12 years' experience in restaurant management and study under various chefs, Moses stresses "Everything we make is fresh, and our own. We use no bottled dressing, no MSG (monosodium glutamate); we make all our own chowders and soups, and use only the freshest, best cuts of meats, poultry and vegetables.

"One of the major reasons I got into this new restaurant was that I wanted to give the people of Wakefield and surrounding towns good food and a unique dining experience, which would be historical, educational, and entertaining as well."

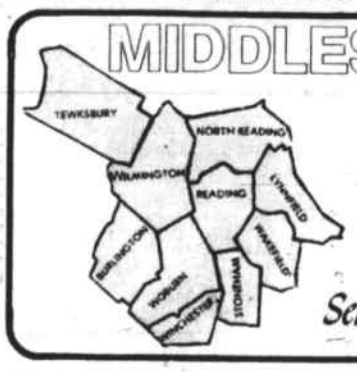

He's done it.

WAKEFIELD'S BOB MOSES OF "WAKEFIELD'S RESTAURANT: the Wakefield native and resident has come up with an authentic, unique concept that combines fine dining and local history at his relatively new Water Street establishment, opened in December of 1984.

Television, like politics, is cyclical. Network television, at least. There are only so many subjects and formats that an be produced on free tv, so you can bet your bottom dollar that sooner or later the same types of programs will reappear.

During the fifties viewers were deluged with westerns and gangster shows. The sixties were filled with glossy private eye and romantic programs. The seventies brought on ethnic comedies and medical shows. Nowadays viewers are tuning into police dramas and nighttime soaps.

For a time during the late sixties and early seventies viewers were also watching shows such as "The Jetsons" and "The Flintstones," half hour animated programs tht were designed ostensibly for grownups. As with any type of tv show, once producers and sponsors caught on that animated cartoon shows for adults were the hot thing at the moment, a whole slew of half hour long animated series appeared. And as with every other type of tv show, the animated series had their run of popularity, then died a quick death. There is no form of death quicker than the death of a tv show that's been given the ax.

For some unknown reason, tv producers get a notion that it's time to revive certain types of shows. Perhaps they get these notions from what is popular in films, what is happening in real life, what kind of books are selling well, or maybe the ideas are strictly from inside their own heads. Whatever the source, sometimes their hunches pan out, sometimes they don't. One such revival is about to take place on tv this fall. In fact, something unique is taking place: not only is a certain type of show being revived, the actual show, with all new episodes, is being brought back.

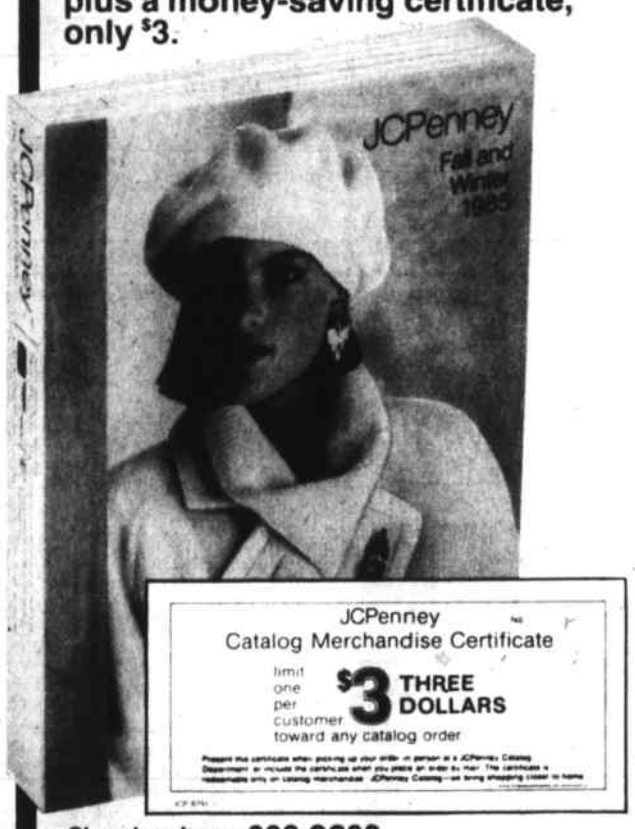

The show that's making a comeback is the popular fifteen-year-old animated series, "The Jetsons." Yes, George, Jane, their boy Elroy, daughter Judy and Astro, their space dog, are about to reappear on our prime time tv screens. As I've already mentioned, all new episodes are being produced for its fall premiere, and that's what makes this revival so special.

I hate to admit it, but yes, I was one of the faithful "Jet-

Whist party, Monday

The second whist party of August will be held Monday, August 26 in the Senior Center starting at 1 p.m. Those wishing to be seated should arrive early.

Harbor cruise a great day

Last Thursday was one of the few picturesque days of the summer. More than 100 seniors spent the lovely day on a boat cruising around Boston Harbor. Reportedly the water was calm, the food delicious and the entertainment delightful

Lost and found

A lovely religious medal has been found at the Senior Center. The owner may claim it by identifying it.

Exercise class cancelled

The exercise class has been cancelled until September. The temperature at the Senior Center is much too uncomfortable for the active exercise needed in the program.

Walk program continues

The walk program is continuing throughout the summer. It is suggested that those wishing to continue with their exercise join this program. Volunteer instructor Ed Curtis plans interesting areas to walk around. The program is valuable for many reasons including the exercise, the fresh air not to mention the good company. Call the Center at 657-7595 for more information.

Arts and crafts

The arts and crafts program is continuing its work on cobbler aprons and pin cushions which are on order. Any senior who can sew is urged to take part in the program Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

New center coming along

Anyone who has not had a chance to check out the new Senior Center is urged to do so. It reportedly looks nice and is a real spirit lifter. With the donation of another Saturday a few weeks ago the carpenters from Local Union No. 41 in Woburn things are really moving along. The large windows have been removed and smaller ones installed. The clapboarding is complete on the back and sides and the men from the public works department have done a fabulous job mowing and raking around the building, trimming shrubs and removing those shrubs which had been blocking the steps. The next step will be to install new doors and paint the building inside and out.

September trips

Travel volunteers Frances Calandrello and Mae Zannizaro have planned overnight trips leaving the Senior Center in September. Frances will oversee a group traveling to Bar Harbor, Maine for three days and Mae will take a group to Neville in the Catskills of New York September 29. Those who would like to join either of these groups are urged to contact Frances at 658-8805 or Mae at 658-9862.

The Harriet Hoctor Ballet School, an established & recognized school, is not a "dance recital school" which spends students' class time and money on preparation and expensive costumes. Our efforts are directed toward giving a secure foundation in classical ballet technique and improving skill while developing coordination, grace, rhythm, poise and self-discipline, not only for the serious dance student, but for those who take ballet to help other talents and interests, or just for the enjoyment of the art.

Peace of Mind For $30

How much is peace of mind worth? Certainly more than $30?

Should you or any member of your family suddenly become ill or be in an accident and need medical care in a hurry, you can be confident of the high quality of care at Choate Hospital — where the basic charge is still only $30, including doctor's fee.

No other hospital or storefront walk-in care center provides comprehensive quality medical care more reasonably.

The Choate Hospital Emergency/Walk-In Care Center never closes. It is open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year — just in case you need us.

Physicians and nurses trained in emergency medicine draw on the resources of every department in the hospital. Laboratory, X-ray (including state-of-the-art CT-Scanning), Respiratory Care, and Operating Room suites are always ready — with excellent care for you and your family. Our staff will ensure the follow-up care you may require by referring you to a primary care physician or appropriate specialist on the Choate-Symmes Medical Staff.

Summer Rental
Coca Cola Kid

Pee-wee's Big Adventure starring Pee-wee Herman (Paul Reubens), Elizabeth Daily, Mark Holton, Diane Salinger. Directed by Tim Burton. Produced by Robert Shapiro and Richard Gilbert Abramson. Written by Reubens, Phil Hartman, Michael Varhol. Rated PG.

It was hard to imagine an entire movie based on the antics of nerdy Pee-wee Herman, a character dreamed up by comedian Paul Reubens. The immediate description that the film first brought to mind was "probably stupid and dull." Well, this pre-conceived notion was both wrong and right. Pee-wee's Big Adventure is amazingly silly, but it is so excessive in its frantic stupidity that it attracts you to it and forces you to laugh.

In all honesty, however, the first 30 minutes of the film, in which Herman does his usual schtick, is not nearly as much fun as the madcap adventures he pursues further into the movie.

Although Herman's routine as he completes his morning toilette and makes a breakfast fit for a nerd are amusing, it is not the stuff of which guffaws are made. His props, however, are something else, and range from a cogs and wheels type of breakfast machine to a shiny red bike, complete with tail fins.

It is the theft of his beautiful bicycle that gets the action rolling along. In his quest to retrieve it, Herman travels across the country on the advice of a psychic, encountering all sorts of wacko people. It is, however, when he reaches Hollywood, and the Warner Brothers Studio (yes, they are the distributors), that things really take off.

Herman becomes embroiled in the funniest chase scene this viewer has ever seen, and has all the earmarks of an old-fashioned, silent classic. With Herman furiously peddling his beloved bike through the studio, including working sets, you will have to wipe tears of laughter from your cheeks. And then, as if to really thumb his nose at the film industry, his "Big Adventure" is made into a movie by the studio. It stars none other than James Brolin as "P.W." and Morgan Fairchild in the fictionalized persona of Herman's friend, Dottie (Elizabeth Daily).

Perhaps this is not the best film out this summer, or even the best slapstick ever made, but it is funny, and unusual enough to satisfy the cult following it is rumored to have achieved. If nothing else, Pee-wee's Big Adventure is worth seeing, even as just a curiosity piece.

Summer Rental starring John Candy, Richard Crenna, Karen Austin, Rip Torn. Directed by Carl Reiner. Produced by George Shapiro. Written by Jeremy Stevens and Mark Reisman. Rated PG (profanity).

It used to be that when you saw director Carl Reiner's name associated with a film, you knew it would be funny. That rule no longer applies, as his films have been a hit or miss proposition for quite some time now. Last Year's All of Me was a hit, but Reiner misses with Summer Rental.

John Candy stars as an air traffic controller suffering from burn-out, who is forced into his first summer vacation in years. So, he packs up the family, and a suitcase full of loud shirts, and heads for Citrus Cove, Florida. However, his summer home, rented sight-unseen, is little more than a glorified shack, and there are several other complications, including a nasty home boy (Richard Crenna) with a chip on his shoulder when it comes to summer renters.

Unfortunately, what sounds like a funny idea on paper just doesn't jump to life. Part of the problem is definitely Reiner's, as the numerous attempts at visual humor never seem to fall into place, as if the entire movie suffered from bad timing. However, no one, including Reiner, could be expected to do much with a script that goes off on unjustified tangents. When Candy's wife, Karen Austin, meets and begins to go on outings with a native playboy with a teenaged son, you think there will be a sub-plot concerning a jealous husband, or that Candy's daughter (Kerri Green) will fall for the boy. But nothing happens. So, what was the point of this, and similar bits of info thrown at us that amount to nothing?

Aside from the fact that Summer Rental is utterly predictable, Candy doesn't bring his usual sparkle to the film. We have always seen him in supporting roles, and he was often the funniest person on screen. But, he simply could not carry this film. His usual lechery was painfully absent, and the dialogue was simply too weak for him to do anything with. However, before deciding that he should forever be consigned to character roles, it would be helpful to see him as a stronger character in a better film.

On a more cheerful note, Rip Torn has a supporting role as a scruffy restauranteur who would rather be a buccaneer. He looks like he is having fun, and therefore conveys his bouyancy to the audience, making him the best thing in this flick. Also, even though Summer Rental may not be up to snuff for adults, it is a harmless, happy enough film, and the early teen crowd should enjoy it.

The Coca-Cola Kid starring Eric Roberts, Gretta Scacchi, Bill Kerr, Chris Hayward. Directed by Dusan Makavejev. Produced by David Roe. Screenplay by Frank Moorhouse. No rating (nudity, profanity).

The Coca-Cola Kid is a strange picture. It draws you into the world of a high pressure soft drink salesman, his batty secretary and the eccentric owner of the liquid competition. But after all is said and done, you can't help but wonder why director Dusan Makavejev bothered to tell us this story, especially as he just lets it drop off instead of rap up in a nice, coherent conclusion.

However, until the less than satisfactory ending, the film is quite interesting. Eric Roberts portrays the Southern bundle of nerves sent to Australia to boost sales, only to discover that there is an entire community outside of Sydney that has never bought even one bottle of his beloved Coca-Cola. Roberts is a tautly wound ball of energy in this picture, and although he has the trappings of a high-powered salesman, one can't help but wonder if an actor with a lighter touch, perhaps a little zanier wouldn't have enhanced the film. Perhaps it is the fact that he just looks so strange, with his dyed blond hair and obvious restlessness. You can't help but equate him with the murderers or hoodlums he has played in the past.

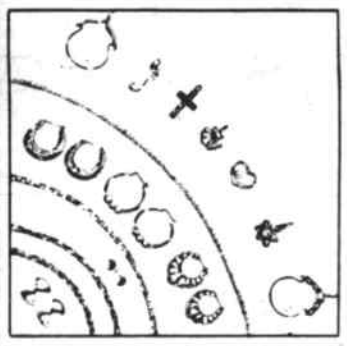

But we are never told why. In the future, Makavejev should work on tying up loose ends, as well as loosening up his endings from silly symbolism devoid of any real meaning.

sons" fans from more than a decade ago who would have given up a date with a dream girl rather than miss an episode of the space-aged family's misadventures. Well, maybe not a date with a dream girl, but you get the picture. I realy liked "The Jetsons." And I wasn't alone in my house; the show was popular with my entire family, especially my kid sister who wouldn't miss an episode either.

According to the producers of "The Jetsons," all of the actors who provided the voiceovers for the original shows will return to provide the voices for the characters in the new shows. The producers promise us viewers that there'll be new surprises in this revived version of the show, but I guess we'll have to wait till the fall to find out exactly what those surprises are.

I've never really given much thought to why I enjoyed "The Jetsons" so much. Maybe subconsciously I didn't want to admit that I enjoyed the show. After all, I was a grown young man, and it's not mature-sounding to say you enjoy watching cartoons at that age. It would be like saying you still get a kick out of reading comic strips at thirty. A lot of us read them, but we don't like to admit it.

Well, I'm coming out of the closet and saying I did enjoy the half hour animated series. The shows certainly provided some light-hearted relaxation from a pretty heavy academic schedule at that time, and to be honest, I'd probably enjoy watching the shows again for the same kind of break from a vigorous routine, albeit not of the academic nature anymore.

The charm of "The Jetsons" was in the way the show exaggerated the everyday dilemmas every family faces, and made us laugh at what we saw of ourselves in those hilarious space-aged characters. The show was an animated version of "All In the Family" and "The Jeffersons," but without reference to ethnicity or ethnic humor. Although people of all ages watched and enjoyed "The Jetsons," I think the program was really written and produced for adults.

There is something about this revival that bothers me, though. It's the way producers and sponsors will quickly rush to imitate "The Jetsons" if the show catches on in popularity again. We could suddenly be swamped with one animated tv show after another by mid-season.

There will surely be a revival of "The Flintstones." That wouldn't be too bad if that were where the imitation ended. But that is not likely to happen. Other imitations of "The Jetsons" will surely follow.

Let's take a gander at what some of those imitation animation sitcoms might look like: there's bound to be at least one new animated show about the misadventures of a bunch of minority kids, sort of like the old "Fat Albert" cartoon series, only it won't take place in a ghetto by any stretch of the imagination. Nosiree, these kids will be children of well-to-do yuppies, so the show will be set in a place like Palm Springs, where every eighteen-year-old kid drives either a BMW or a Porche. There may even be a moral lesson to be taught somewhere in that theme. Cartoons usually don't deal with moral issues. Otherwise Wiley Coyote would have captured the Road Runner a long time ago, and Bugs Bunny would have surely bitten the dust by now from one of Elmer Fudd's shotgun blasts. But "The Jetsons" and "The Flintstones" did deal with moral issues, in a subliminal way, and that's what separated them from other cartons, and that's what made them so appealing to adults.

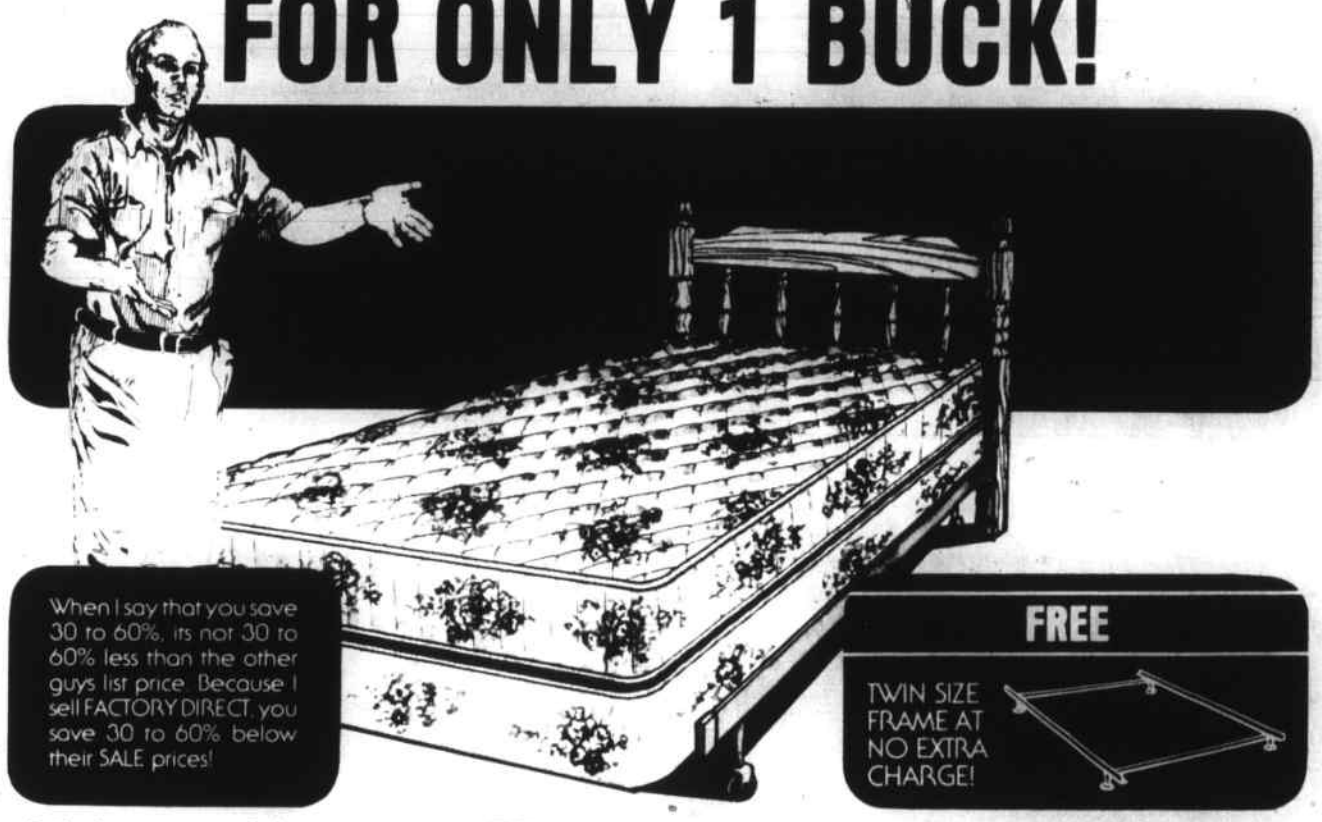

"Beverly Hills Cop," "Animal House" and the National Lampoon's "Vacation" would all make likely candidates for transition to animated tv series. "Beverly Hills Cop" wouldn't make a bad half hour cartoon series, but the show would have to have Eddie Murphy doing the lead voiceover and "Writing," since it was he who made the film version the success it was, and I can't picture anybody else in the lead role.

There would surely be a cartoon series featuring the adventures of a New Woman-type female lead. They are must characters in almost every type of tv show these days, and an animated cartoon show would be no exception.

No matter how many imitations crop up this coming season, none will likely have the charm or follow "The Jetsons" will have. The original show had only a handful of episodes - I don't recall exactly how many, but I think they numbered around thirty, and I could have watched each one of them over and over again. The producers of the new show insist the same charm and quality of production will be evident in the new episodes, and I hope, for the sake of all of us "Jetsons" fans, they are right.

Woodchips

ANTHONY MANCONI

I have learned from my cousin, Janet Luci that Jack Carroll of Wilmington is a fan of Woodchips. Both of them are teachers at Malden Catholic Where Janet teaches Spanish and Jack is an English teacher. I hope Jack brings a copy of Woodcips to school every week because of its humor and not to show his English class an example of dangling participles, split infinitives and rambling sentences.

I received a letter from my former English teacher, Miss Mary Sullivan saying "your nephew, Kevin Fisher sent me a copy of Woodchips last week and I count my lucky stars that I now live 3000 miles away. I'm glad that I don't have to admit or explain to anyone that I taught you English. All you need is a pair of baggy pants and with thosestupid jokes of yours you would certainly resurrect burlesque. If you ever come to the San Francisco Bay area where I live, please 'DROP IN', you'll make quite a splash."

OK, just for that I'm glad I put my pet frog in your desk drawer. So what if it croaked when you opened the drawer, Miss Sullivan, I still don't know what a split infinitive looks like if I stepped on it, or a dangling participle if it bit me.

Mark Twain didn't know what they were either and Will Rogers said during the depression, people who don't use ain't, ain't eating.

Marie Aloisi said to her son Mark, "You don't know what side your bread is buttered on." "So what," Mark responded, I'm going to eat both sides anyway." Father Time and Mother Nature were married and had four seasons.

Sign on a glass shop, "This job is one pane after another."

The teacher asked Dennis Tully "tell the class what you know about the great Spanish explorer Balboa." "Well" said Dennis, "he came upon this great big body of water and radioed King Ferdinand to tell him the good news." King Ferdinand exclaimed, "tell me where it is, be more specific." "that's it,"replied Balboa, it's the 'Specific Ocean."

Three ladies on a church committee couldn't come to an agreement. They asked the pastor to intercede and try to end the debate. At the meeting as usual, the ladies started to speak at once. The wise and genial man of the cloth who had seen committees come and go said, "please let's be fair about this and let the oldest lady speak first." Dan MacMaster told me that dentists who join the army are automatically assigned to the "Yankee Division."

Dr. Joseph DiPietro of Lynnfield and my family dentis for many years is the only one I know who can tell my wife Kathy when to open her mouth. The only time I can open my mouth in my house is when I yawn. That's because by wife has a "perfect right." Her "left jab" isn't bad either.

"Well for crying out loud, how many relatives have you got anyway"? That question was asked by Jimmy Quinno at the Woburn Elks. "I see Italian sounding names like Angelo Quagenti, and Irish sounding names like Uncle John Shea. What are you anyway a member of the League of Nations?"

I guess I'll have to explain once more. My mother was an O'Donnell and was born in Ireland. She was one of eight children who lived in the Middlesex East area. My father John was born in Sardina, Italy and there's nothing 'fishy' about that. He was one of ten children and from them I am fortunate to have over a hundred cousins. My Aunt Maria from Wilmington and My Uncle John Shea, formerly from N. Reading and now living on Revere Beach are the only two of the old timers.

I keep saying to Fr. Bob Burns, "don't blame me for my ancestors." "I don't" Bob replied. "I blame them for you."

My cousin, Brian told his boss he couldn't work because his wife, Mae hit him wih an oak leaf. The leaf from the dining room table.

If you insist on having "one for the road," you can bet on also getting a state trooper for a chaser.

My wife Kathy just finished a coconut and banana diet. She didn't lose any weight but boy can she climb a tree.

When my father took the citizenship examination he answered every question about our flag. Being a kind and considerate man he tried to help him out by asking "Giovanni" "What did you see flying over the court house when you came here this morning?" With his face beaming with a great big smile because he thought that he knew the answer he responded "pidgeons, your Honor."

Congratulations to the following athletes who were awarded varsity letters from Bentley College. Sean O'Beirne from Wilmington for tennis, Vicki Westover from Tewksbury for softball and Derek Vachon of Tewksbury for golf.

The National Honor Soceity officers for 1985-86 at Stoneham High School are Mary Frongillo, president; Elaine Vasilopoulos, vice-president; Julia Mahoney, treasurer; Melissa Henrikse, secretary; James Campagna is their advisor.

My cousin Dean Murphy's boss caught him reading the newspaper during working hours. "Dean when you come to the Help Wanted ads, make notes.oodchips.asc If you are practicing live and let live that's fine, but try live and help live. It's much more effective.

Folks, anyone who can swallow a pill while drinking from a water fountain deserves to get well.

My wife Kathy sent me to the pet store to buy a canary and to make sure it was a good singer. The next day the canary's beautiful singing filled the house with song, but Kathy noticed that the bird hopped on one leg. " Why you idiot did you buy a lame canary." "Well what the heck did you want," I shouted, "a singer or a dancer."

VOLUNTEERS ON NORTH SHORE

Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries needs volunteers to assist the agency in various rehabilitation programs for the handicapped at its North Shore facilities. Course credit can be arranged for students.

The Activities of Daily Living program at the Beverly and Lynn workshops needs volunters to assist staff in teaching independent living skills to adults with mental retardation. By teaching clients grooming finance, functional academics, transportation and personal hygiene, they learn to become part of the community.

Volunteers are also needed on the North Shore to assist handicapped adults in developing better work skills, teaching sign language to the deaf, and assisting in the supervision of recreational activities. In addition, the Lynn workshop needs volunteers to assist in a senior social group.

Share your talents and help others. Volunteer experience is a good way to test your interest before embarking on full-time work.

For more information, contact Rosemary Ross, Director of Volunteer Services at Morgan Memorial, 95 Berkeley Street, Boston, Ma. 02116. Telephone 357-9710, ext. 245 (on Wednesdays only).

Children's Drama Workshop celebrates 14th anniversary

The Children's Drama Workshop, 19 Robin Road, marks its 14th anniversary with the beginning of the fall-winter semester on Sept. 16. Taught by Irene Ehl, the Workshop is for children from 7 to 17 years of age.

The Workshop year is divided into two 15-week semesters. The first semester is devoted to theater games, improvisations and pantomimes. "Through the playing of theater games," according to Mrs. Ehl, "and the intuitive unrehearsed acting in improvisations and pantomimes, the students explore his own potential by sharpening his concentrations, expressing his emotions with body and voice and using his imagination, thus creating one three levels—the intellectual, the physical and the intuitive.

The second semester concentrates on rehearsing monologues, scenes and plays for a public performance in June. During this period the student learns the art of focus and motivation, the building of stage character and stage movement.Mrs. Ehl states, "Public performance will raise the studen's whole level of understanding and skills experienced during the first semester. The importance of both semesters is that together they work towards one goal, the total growth of the student in creativity, self-confidence and dicipline."

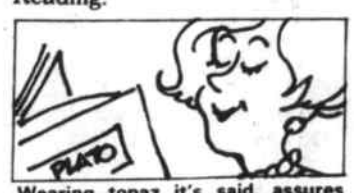

Also, by becoming aware of the variety of humand experiences through the playwright's eyes and by acting out some of these situations, the children learn more about themselves and the world around them.

Children's Drama Workshop students have acted in local community and summer theatres, playing major roles in comedy, drama and musical comedy. Most recently, Ron Bashford, an alumnus of Children's Drama Workshop, completed an apprenticeship with Williamstown Theater Festival. He appeared in "Undiscovered Country" by Tom Stoppard with Blythe Danner. This theater is consedered on of the most prestigious summer stock theaters in the country.

Irene Ehl, founder of the Children's Drama Workshop, is a certified teacher and a graduate of Boston University with a degree in theater arts and speech. She has been an active member of the Quannapowitt Players of Reading for many years, both as an actress and a director. Mrs. Ehl also directs for other community theatres and has acted and directed in the New England Theater Conference.

The Workshop is located near the intersection of route 93 and 128 making it accessible from all directions.

For more information concerning the Workshop, please call Irene Ehl at 944-7214 or write, at 19 Robin Rd, Reading.

DID YOU KNOW ?

Foam is right at home in a variety of unusual uses.

• One Virginia farmer places a foam cup at the end of each ear of corn to drive away the birds! He explains that foam cups insulate, but don't generate heat. Available in the right size to cover ears of corn, and sturdy enough to withstand the elements, foam cups might just put the scarecrows out of work.
